LEARNING TO KEY CORRECTLY

The human body is not designed for long sessions of repetitive movement. You might even know someone who has strained their hands and fingers by playing video games. Keyboarding can present similar dangers. When you key, you repeat many small movements with your hands and fingers. You might be keying for a long time. If you position yourself correctly, however, and use ergonomic tools and techniques, you can avoid strain and fatigue.

Even if you do not practice healthy, ergonomic keying techniques, you might not experience any problems while you are young and flexible. However, over the years, if you don’t begin to key correctly, you will repeat thousands of stressful movements. You risk painful long-lasting injury that can reduce the quality of your life and your ability to work. It pays to develop healthy, ergonomic keying habits now.

ADJUSTING YOUR WORKSTATION

In a classroom you do not usually have much choice in the equipment you must use. However, flexible equipment and a little imagination can help you adjust your workstation.

Adjusting Your Keyboard and Mouse  You want your fingers to gently curve over the keys while your wrist is in a flat, neutral position.

- If wrist rests are available, place one in front of the keyboard as a guide. Never rest your arms, hands, or wrists while you are keying.
- Place your mouse or trackball at the same height as your keyboard, in easy reach of your preferred hand.

Adjusting the Slope of Your Keyboard  If your keyboard slants toward you, you need to adjust it so it is flat or slopes down away from you.

- Flatten the kickstand at the back of the keyboard.
- Alternatively, raise the front of the keyboard about $\frac{3}{4}$” by using door wedges, a wood strip, or a box.

Adjusting the Lighting  It is important to arrange lighting so you can clearly see the images on your monitor without any glare.

- Position your monitor at an angle to windows and bright lights, so reflections do not wash out the monitor image.
- Keep task lighting focused on your desk to illuminate reading and writing material, but use indirect light to illuminate your monitor.
- Adjust the monitor brightness based on the available light.

CORRECT KEYING POSTURE

After you have adjusted your workstation, you need to maintain the correct keying posture. Following are some guidelines for keying correctly:

- Center your body on the J key, about a hand’s length from the keyboard and directly in front of the monitor.
- Hold your head straight over your shoulders, without straining forward or backward.
- Position the monitor at eye level, about arm’s length away, so you look down about 10 degrees.
- Elongate and relax your neck.
- Keep your shoulders down.
- Tilt your keyboard slightly down toward the monitor. This helps you keep your wrists neutral and your fingers relaxed and curled.
- Adjust your chair and keyboard so your elbows bend at right angles.
- Keep your arms close to your sides, but free to move slightly.
- Keep your wrists relaxed and straight in a “neutral” position.
- Keep your back upright or tilted slightly forward from the hips. Keep the slight natural curve of your lower back. Use a cushion or adjust the chair to support your lower back.
- Keep your knees slightly lower than your hips.
- Adjust your chair so your feet are well supported. Use a footrest, if needed.

AVOIDING STRESS WHEN KEYING

There are two ways to avoid stress when keying. First, you need to maintain the correct keying posture as you key. Second, you need to take a short break every 20 to 30 minutes and perform stretching exercises designed to help you avoid strain, fatigue, and injury.

Maintaining a Correct Keying Position It’s easy to start keying by using the correct keying position. As we key, however, many of us lose our focus, and bad habits begin to creep in. It’s important to check your keying position to make sure you are still keying correctly. The following figures show some guidelines for maintaining correct keying positions.

Stretching and Resting  When you key for a long time, your muscles stiffen. You become fatigued and risk injury. You build tension in many parts of your body, including your neck, arms, and wrists. To relieve the tension and reduce the threat of injury, you should stretch before you start keying. You should also take short breaks from keying every 20 to 30 minutes and stretch.

Stretch 1: Neck Stretch

Sitting tall, bring your chin toward your chest, stretching the back of your neck. Slowly repeat two times. See Figure B-5.
Stretch 2: Head Turn
Begin with your head in a neutral position. Look all the way to the right without moving your chest or upper back. Then, look to the left. Slowly repeat two times. See Figure B-6.

Stretch 3: Head Tilt
Begin with your head in a neutral position. Bring your ear toward your shoulder without turning your head or lifting your shoulder. Hold for a count of five. Reverse directions. See Figure B-7.

Stretch 4: Downward Wrist Stretch
With your left fingers pointing down and your palm in, place your right hand over your left knuckles. Extend your arms straight out. Gently press back with your right hand to a count of ten. Reverse hands. Repeat the stretches using a fist. See Figure B-8.

Stretch 5: Upward Wrist Stretch
With your left fingers pointing up, place your right hand over your left palm. Extend your arms straight out. Gently press back with your right hand to a count of ten. Reverse hands. Repeat the stretches with fingers pointing down and the palm out. See Figure B-9.

BENEFITS OF KEYING CORRECTLY
Training takes effort and time. If you already use a keyboard, you might have to re-teach your body to use correct techniques. You might ask yourself “Why make the effort? I’m already keying fast enough.”

Just imagine you will probably be using a computer for the rest of your life. If you don’t learn now, you will probably need to learn later. There’s really no escaping it. Besides, if you learn to key correctly, you will:
• Increase your speed.
• Increase your efficiency, making fewer errors.
• Increase your effectiveness because you can see your work and screen while your hands are free to work.
• Stay healthy, avoid injury, and remain productive over your lifetime.

BREAKING BAD HABITS
Many of you might have been keying for years. However, without any formal training, you could easily have developed bad habits.

The best way to correct bad habits is to use natural breaks as checkpoints. For instance, look at your own habits at the end of each exercise, paragraph, or page you type. Consider your posture, sitting position, hand position, keying technique, and work habits.

To help you break your bad habits, consult the following “Bad Habits Checklist.” Check it when you start keying and when you take a break. If you know you have a particular bad habit, try to focus on the correction at the beginning of every keying session. Eventually the bad habit will be replaced by the good habit. It takes work, but it’s worth it.

LEARN AND PRACTICE

Begin keying by placing your fingers on the eight keys—called the home keys—A S D F J K L and semicolon as shown below.

The index finger of your left hand should rest on F, your second and third fingers rest on D and S, and the little finger of your left hand rests on A. For your right hand, your index finger should rest on J, your second and third fingers rest on K and L, and your little finger rests on .

From now on, the finger you use to press a key will be named for its home-key letter. For example, your left little finger is the A finger Your right index finger is the J finger.

From the home keys, you can reach all the other keys on the keyboard. The keyboard diagram shows which homekey finger is used for each key. For example, you use the D finger to key all the keys in the band of green on the left. You use the L finger to key all the keys in the band of red on the right, and so on. When any finger is not actually pressing a key, you should keep it resting lightly on its home key.

The row of keys containing the home keys is called the home row. The row below the home row is the first row. The row above the home row is the third row.
Learn and Practice the Spacebar  Notice that on the keyboard diagram, the keys you have learned are darker and tinted with their background color. Now locate the Spacebar on the diagram. You use the Spacebar to insert spaces between letters and words. You press it by using the thumb of your writing hand (that is, the hand you use for writing). You do not use the thumb of your other hand.

Key the home-key letters, inserting a space after each letter by pressing the Spacebar quickly and lightly. (Drill lines are numbered. Do not key the green numbers.)

1 a s d f j k l ;

Learn and Practice Enter  You do not have to wait for a text line to be “full” before starting a new line. Pressing the Enter key starts a new line of text whenever you need one. You press Enter by using the $ finger. Try to keep the | finger on its home key when you press Enter.

Now press Enter (\textasciitilde) to start a new line. Key each of the lines below twice. Press Enter (\textasciitilde) after each line.

4 fd jk sa l; fds jkl dsa kl;\textasciitilde
5 dfsa l;kj dddss kkll ffaa ;;jj fjdk ls;a\textasciitilde

Learn and Practice Double-Space  You can add a blank line between lines of text by pressing Enter twice. This is how you double-space text. (Two consecutive Enters are sometimes referred to as a double line-space.)

Key a line of text, press Enter, and then key it again. After you key a line the second time, press Enter twice before keying a new line. Using this method, key each line twice, and double-space after each pair of lines.

NEW KEYS

Use the finger.

A hyphen (-) is used for compound words. It is also used to divide words between lines, although most word-processing programs do this automatically.

Use the finger.

A diagonal (/), often called a forward slash, is used in abbreviations, in fractions, and to express alternatives or relationships.

SPACING TIP

In normal use, do not space before or after the diagonal.

WARM UP

Key each line twice. Double-space after each pair of lines. Hold your head straight, without leaning it forward or backward.

If you are doing something—like a science fair project—that requires you to enter lots of numbers, you will benefit from using the ten key pad or “ten key.” This is the number pad to the right of the letters on your keyboard or the ten keys on calculators and adding machines. (Most laptop computers do not have a ten key pad. Numbers are on the top row of the keyboard.) Good ten key skills may help you get your work done faster and more accurately.

Your home row is now a home key 5 in the middle of the 4 5 6 row. This key usually has a small raised line to guide you, so you don’t have to look when placing your right hand lightly on the keys. Even lefties must use the right hand for the ten key, unless they have a specially designed keyboard with the number pad on the left.

You will use your index finger for 4, your middle finger for 5, and your ring finger for 6. The same arrangement goes for the 1 2 3 row below, and the 7 8 9 row above. You use your thumb for the 0 Ins on the bottom and your pinkie for the / * – and + keys.

PRACTICE

Rest your right hand lightly on 4 5 6 and + keys, with your index finger on 4, your middle finger on 5 (the home key), your ring finger on 6, and your pinkie on +.

Double-space after each line, using your pinkie on the Enter key to return:

1 4, 5, 6 and +
2 0456++65400
3 6645+455650
4 400+566+450
5 5+566465++4

Technique Tip

You can find lots of ten key lessons online, by typing “ten key lessons” into any search engine.
